Ashley Biden graduated from Tulane University and earned a Master’s of Social Work from the University of Pennsylvania. In 2012, Ashley joined the Delaware Center for Justice, which focuses on criminal justice reform, as associate director before being appointed executive director in 2014. Prior to that stint, which ended in 2019, she was a social worker for 15 years at the Delaware Department of Services for Children, Youth and Their Families. While there, Ashley created programs for youth in the juvenile-justice, foster-care and mental-health systems. Ashley currently consults with the Alliance for Safety and Justice, where she is focused on building out trauma recovery centers throughout Pennsylvania.